The line features one-of-a-kind textiles designed by Maggie herself , convertible bags, and backpacks. Maggie describes her bags as 'bold and adventurous, yet utilitarian.' For the first line, there are three styles including a classic backpack, convertible mini backpack/crossbody, and belt bag that converts to a wristlet or wallet. Each of these styles are available in multiple prints, or in solid black leather, tanned in Milwauk . 'I personally am either wearing black, colorful prints or a combination of both. My collection is a reflection of that aesthetic.'

Maggie designed for Local brands in New York . She has made custom backpacks for clients as well, maintaining a strong knowledge of construction. Maggie has a heavy hand in production, laser cutting at makerspace and preparing materials to be sewn in Milwauk .

Maggie combines her experience and creativity with her textile degree to make bold and unique patterns which are then printed on canvas. 'I plan on collaborating with artists in various mediums in upcoming seasons for freshly inspired prints. For the fall collection, I collaborated with my husband Corey, who is an artist, to make the the Graffiti print.
